Dear Friends and Customers:

Spring will soon be here and many of my old customers are wondering what I will be able to do this year. As it does not seem advisable to put out a catalog or even a complete price list this year, I am sending you this note to let you know that I am still in business, (in a small way) and will try to do all I can under the circumstances to take care of your horticultural wants this year. I had hoped that the labor situation would be a little easier this spring, but at the present time prospects are worse than ever. I may personally have to do all the work that is done. Probably most of my time will have to be given to digging nursery stock. Some large orders I will try to deliver, and I will try to plant some jobs, but I urge all who can come out and get their plants and plant them to do so.

There is still some fine stock and many unusual things in the nursery, in spite of all difficulties. On account of the lack of help the last few years there has not been as much small stock planted as should have been, and some stock which would normally be sold is still in the nursery overgrown. Last fall the hail did a great deal of damage to the growing stock. The evergreen trees and tougher shrubs were battered and bruised, but will come out of it with a few months of new growth. Many tender-barked shrubs were so badly bruised that they later killed back almost to the ground. Of course the roots were undamaged and we will dig everything with the usual extra care so that by the end of the season they should be as good as new. We will make allowance in the price for all damaged stock.

On the back we are listing a few things which are in good shape and are especially valuable stock. Look in our past catalogs for our complete lists of stock. In most cases we will have sufficient stock to handle all normal planting jobs. We will have a few fruit trees and roses, but not a complete line. When help is again available we hope to be able to supply you with all the finer things in plants. Until we can give better service do not hesitate to call us for advise on all your gardening problems. We also recommend that you join the Colorado Forestry and Horticulture Association and receive its bulletin, "The Green Thumb". This will answer many of your questions about gardening under Colorado conditions.
